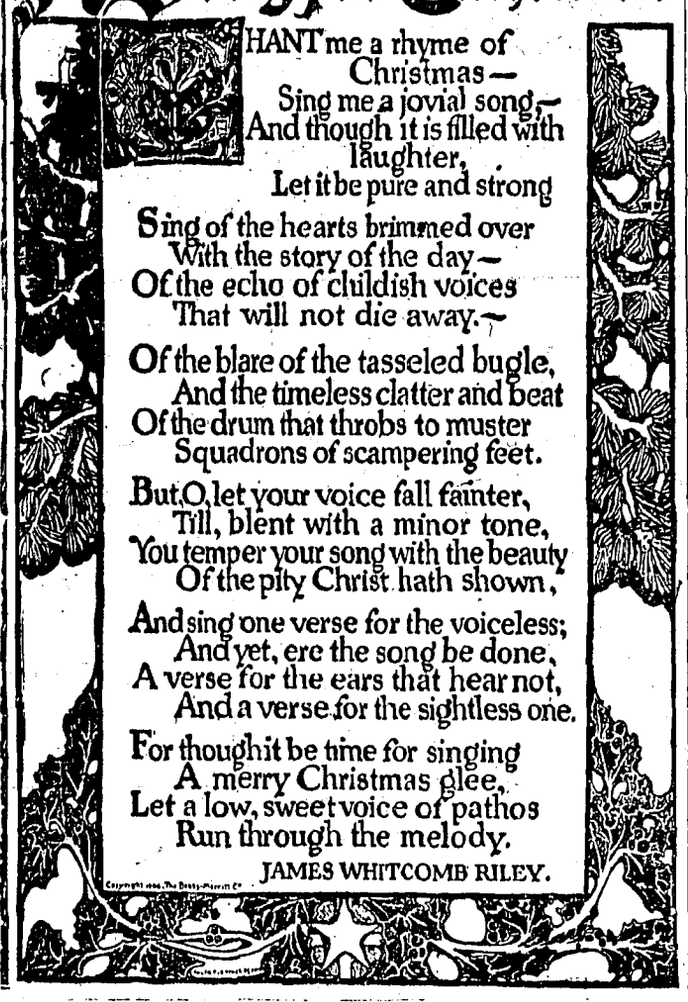
A Song for Christmas.



CHANT me a rhyme of Christmas—
Sing me a jovial song,—
And though it is filled with laughter,
Let it be pure and strong

Sing of the hearts brimmed over
With the story of the day—
Of the echo of childish voices
That will not die away.—

Of the blare of the tasseled bugle,
And the timeless clatter and beat
Of the drum that throbs to muster
Squadrons of scampering feet.

But O, let your voice fall fainter,
Till, blent with a minor tone,
You temper your song with the beauty
Of the pity Christ hath shown,

And sing one verse for the voiceless;
And yet, ere the song be done,
A verse for the ears that hear not,
And a verse for the sightless one.

For though it be time for singing
A merry Christmas glee,
Let a low, sweet voice of pathos
Run through the melody.

BIG EXHIBIT OF POULTRY.

FOURTH ANNUAL SHOW OF MONMOUTH POULTRY CLUB HELD AT RED BANK LAST WEEK.

The Exhibition Was Held in the Armory and Was the Biggest Ever Held by the Club—The Entries Numbered 100 and Over 1,400 Birds Were Displayed by Poultry Fanciers from All Over the Country—Many Prizes of Silver Cups, Gold Pieces and Merchandise Awarded, and Exhibitors from This Section Captured Many of Them.

The fourth annual exhibition of the Monmouth poultry club was held last week in the armory on Monmouth street. It was a big success in every way. The show had more exhibitors, more exhibits, more visitors and keener competition in all classes than at any of the previous shows held by the Red Bank club.

In order to accommodate the increased number of entries in the poultry and pigeon classes the display of pet stock was omitted from this year's show. Even with this department out the classes were well filled, the exhibits were crowded and the capacity of the hall was taxed to its utmost.

More than 1,400 birds were shown by one hundred exhibitors and in many classes the judges had a hard time to decide which was the best bird. Much friendly rivalry was shown by poultry breeders in this vicinity and the Monmouth county poultry fanciers entered many fine fowls. Features of this year's show were the number of birds sent to Red Bank by exhibitors in New York state and Pennsylvania and the great interest taken in poultry by the women exhibitors and visitors.

The Red Bank show ranks with the largest poultry shows in the country. The exhibition last week did much to keep the Monmouth poultry club in the front rank of the large poultry clubs in the East.

TROUBLE OVER WATER.

EATONTOWN TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE AFTER TINTERN MANOR CO.

Their Counsel Asks Utilities Commissions to Take a Hand in the Matter and Force the Company to Grant a Number of Requests.

William L. Edwards, counsel for the Eatontown township committee, has applied to the public utilities commission to force the Tintern Manor water company to extend its mains in certain parts of Eatontown village and to reduce its rate. This action is the outcome of a number of requests made to the water company. All of the requests have been ingnored.

Mr. Edwards received his instructions at a recent meeting of the township committee, at which time the water company was severely criticised. Mr. Edwards laid his complaint in writing before the utilities commission last week. The complaint sets forth that the water company was granted its franchise on November 20, 1899, by the Eatontown township committee. The second section of the franchise provides that the company shall lay mains at intervals of not more than 1,000 feet, and to have attached to the mains improved apparatus for fire hydrants. The franchise provides that the company is to furnish its customers in Eatontown township with water at a price not exceeding that paid in adjoining municipalities, and shall furnish such fire hydrants as the township committee may deem necessary at a cost not exceeding $25 a hydrant each year.

The Eatontown township committee claims that the citizens of that township are paying more for water than is charged in adjoining towns. Since the granting of the franchise the township has grown in population, and the company has not extended its mains in proportion to this growth. A large number of houses are not supplied with water because the mains are too far away from the dwellings. Corlies avenue, Franklin street, Clinton street and Maple avenue, which are among the most popular residential streets of Eatontown village, are without water.

Requests have been made to the company to lay mains on these streets from time to time, but the company has refused to grant them on the grounds that the extension of the water system on these streets would not be a paying investment. The petition to the utilities commission complains that unless mains are laid on the streets mentioned the town will be without adequate fire protection.

GUN CLUB SHOOT.

George Crawford Wins Holmdel Match and a Box of Cigars.

The Holmdel gun club has taken on a new lease of life and will hold matches during the winter. No contests were held on the club grounds during the summer. At Saturday's shoot George Crawford and George Schenck tied for first place with scores of 23 each. In the shoot off Mr. Crawford won and was awarded a prize of a box of cigars. The second prize was a knife and was won by Oscar Layster. He and Jacob Wyckoff tied for second place, and Mr. Layster won the shoot off. The third prize, a box of shells, was won by John L. Ely, who broke twenty blue rocks. The club will hold its next shoot in December.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

The store of Hendrickson & Applegate has always been the foremost store in Red Bank for the sale of Holiday Goods. This is true this year, just as it has been true every year since the store was started.

Year by year we have seen the store grow and year by year we have seen Christmas customs slowly change. When this store was started, about a quarter of a century ago, it was the custom to give Christmas Presents, but the Presents of those days were very different from the Christmas Gifts of today. In those days the presents were mostly gewgaws, or trifles of not much account. Considerable money could be spent on them and they looked pretty, but they were of no actual use so far as service is concerned.

Gradually the custom changed. The gewgaws of those days are now never seen. Instead of spending a dollar or twenty dollars on something which looked beautiful as long as it retained its freshness, and which was then flung into the waste basket, the buyer of Christmas presents nowadays seeks out the useful and the serviceable. The present may be beautiful, and it usually is, but it must also be useful. A gift which belonged to the old gewgaw class would not now be regarded with favor anywhere.

This store holds its pre-eminence as a place for buying Christmas Gifts because it combines the useful, the beautiful and the reasonably priced. The store affords a vast range of goods in almost every line of furnishings for the home. The goods have been specially selected, and a dollar spent here gets a full dollar's worth of value. Frequently---usually, in fact---a dollar spent here gets more for the money than a dollar spent elsewhere; but that's one of the things which has always made this store popular and which has made it the favorite buying place for Christmas Goods of solid quality.

Only a few items can be given on this page, but our whole building is a perfect storehouse of Christmas things.

TOWN TALK.

Some of the commissioners and some of their friends are saying that people will be surprised when the present board goes out of office. They say the debt of the town will be lower than people think it will be, and that the increase in the debt of Red Bank during the three years the Republicans have been in power will be only $100,000 or $125,000 or some such matter. To most people it would seem that an increase in the public debt of the town of $100,000 or $125,000 in three years' time was ample, but maybe politicians look at things differently from taxpayers.

When the Democratic board went out of power three years ago the coming January, they left an indebtedness of about $17,000. But they also left financial assets in unpaid taxes of that year, etc., of about $35,000. This gave the Republican board a balance of about $18,000 to begin the year with. All through that year the Republicans declared that they were running behind because the Democrats had left them saddled with $17,000 of debt, and they denied over and over that there had been any assets in the treasury. At the close of the year the financial statement of Dr. William M. Thompson, the collector, showed that $35,000 or so of assets had been left on hand by the old board, and that instead of the old board having a debt to contend with, they had a big amount to begin the year.

Everybody is familiar with the way the town has been run the past three years. Expenses have been increased in every direction. The town appears to have been conducted for the benefit of politicians instead of for the benefit of the public. The salaries of politicians have been increased, though there were plenty of good men who would have been glad to take the jobs at the old rates, and put in all their time on the town's business at that. Now at the end of three years they boast that the town is only $100,000 or $125,000 more in debt than it was when the present bunch took hold of the job of running the town.

It may be that during the remainder of the year the present commissioners will hold down expenses, in order to make as good a showing as possible. If they do every taxpayer will be glad. The fiscal year does not end until February 1st, and it is certain that when the new commissioners take office on January 1st the business of the town will be conducted on a business basis. This will also tend to decrease the town's debt by the time the fiscal year ends, and it is probable that the work of the new board for the last month of the fiscal year is counted on by the present commissioners to help the financial condition of the town.

The current expenses of a municipality each year should be paid each year. Taking the statement of the commissioners and their friends at its face value, that the debt of the town when they go out of power will be only $100,000 or $125,000 more than it was when they came in power, is that really worth bragging about? Especially is it worth bragging about when there was a balance of net assets of $18,000 or thereabouts to begin with. Can the people of Red Bank see anything in the town which the town did not have three years ago, which they think is worth $100,000 or $125,000? And if the public has not got additional property of the value of $100,000 or $125,000, isn't the declaration of the present governing power that they have increased the debt of the town by $100,000 or $125,000 a confession of bad management or worse? The taxes have been enormously increased during the past three years, and assessments have also been increased. In view of these extra taxes imposed, isn't the statement that the town will be $100,000 or $125,000 more in debt at the end of the present fiscal year than it was three years ago, isn't that statement sufficient of itself to show the character of the government the town has had of late?

What has befallen Red Bank is only what befalls every town when the municipality is turned over to partisan government. Politicians are interested in the party; they care vastly more for party success and for the success and profits of politicians than they do for good government. When a municipality is run on the political plan the question is not What is the best thing to do to give the municipality good government? Not at all. The question is What is the best thing to do for the politicians? And the result is a partisan government for the benefit of politicians instead of a government run for the advantage of the people.

The character of the town government under political rule was pointed out at the beginning, when the Republican machine determined to run the town. Red Bank is no different from all other towns in that regard. The politicians of Red Bank are of exactly the same caliber as the politicians in other town. The political leaders are just like the political leaders elsewhere. If their friends and cronies are in power they get everything that can be given to them. The fact that an official pay no taxes is of no account to politicians. Frequently that fact is an advantage from a politician's standpoint, for then that official will have no personal financial reason for promoting good government in spite of promoting political government.

The incoming board of commissioners should first find out exactly where the town stands financially. Then they should cut out every bit of extravagance everywhere. All public work should be put out to the lowest bidder, and this of itself should save the town several thousand dollars every year. Road work should be so conducted that it will not have to be done over. There is no sense in paying men to shovel the dirt in the gutters up in little heaps and then let the heaps remain until the dirt is scattered by wagons or washed back in the gutters by the rains. Nor should the dirt from the highways be used to fill in private property. Every load of earth or dirt taken from the streets should be made to serve some useful public purpose. The same principle should rule in every other department of the town. With sound business management the tax rate ought to be reduced in spite of the greatly increased debt of the town; and under good business rule the town ought not only to have a decreased tax rate, but it ought to get much more improvements that it has been getting of late years. Further, all the time that this work is going on the town should be getting more and more out of debt.

A DOUBLE CELEBRATION.

ALL DAY SERVICES AT ZION CHURCH AT SOUTH EATONTOWN.

The Church was 66 Years Old on That Day, and the Mortgage on the Building was Burned by the Oldest and Youngest Members.

A double celebration was observed Sunday of last week at the Zion Methodist church at South Eatontown. The 66th anniversary of the church was observed and the mortgage on the church was burned. The ceremonies lasted all day and were attended by large congregations. Among the visiting clergymen was Rev. C. D. Havel of Asbury Park, presiding elder of the colored Methodist churches in this district. Rev. James E. Sarjennt is pastor of the Eatontown church.

The ceremonies were begun with a sunrise meeting at six o'clock in the morning. This was followed by a meeting in which a number of speeches were made. A eulogy was given by Dr. Havel. After the eulogy the mortgage on the church was burned. This ceremony was performed by Mrs. Phoebe Cummel and Harry Livingstone, the oldest and youngest members of the congregation. The mortgage amounted to $122. Originally it was much larger than this amount, but payments have been made on it from time to time. Mr. Sarjennt received many congratulations on the fact that it was during his pastorate that the church mortgage was wiped out.

At night a platform meeting was held at which addresses were made by the men of the congregation. The church was lighted for the first time with the Ford system of illumination, and the new lighting plan gave general satisfaction. The system was installed at a cost of $130. The contributions at the services amounted to $72.

Lober led the march in the course of which they had the marchers form the letters V. M. C., which stand for the motto of the organization. Following the march refreshments were served by the committee, the members of which were W. E. Woolley, Jr., A. S. VanBuskirk, C. J. Lehr, G. S. Hyer, C. Moore, F. V. Croes, A. M. Haigh, A. W. HORSE FELL IN DITCH.

Neighbors of Lincroft Farmer Help to Get the Animal Out.

A mare owned by Charles J. Leonard of Lincroft fell in a sportive mood a few days ago and began rolling on the ground. It rolled down a bank in a ditch and was unable to regain its footing. Charles Reid, who transports the children from Everett to the Lincroft school, saw the feet of the animal waving in the air. He went for other men and they managed to get the horse out of the ditch. The animal was badly bruised and scratched, but is getting better.

Still Hale and Hearty.

Thomas P. Anderson of Eatontown, who is more than eighty years old and who is overseer of the poor of Eatontown township, went for a walk during the rain storm last Friday week. Over his head was an umbrella more than 100 years old. Both Mr. Anderson and the umbrella are in a good state of preservation in spite of their advanced age.

Capt. John Edwards, who farms the Hankinson place at Eatontown, will give up farming and will move to New York state. Edwards are farming the Hankinson place together.

NEW ASSOCIATION SECRETARY.

William E. Bunn Selected as Head of Red Bank Association.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Red Bank young men's association held recently William E. Bunn of Ocean Grove was chosen as secretary to succeed Jacob L. Kohler, who resigned several months ago. Since Mr. Kohler's resignation Jacob V. Creveling, principal of the Mechanic street school, has been acting secretary. Mr. Creveling was kept too busy with school affairs and he notified the directors that he would fill the office only until they secured a successor for Mr. Kohler.

Mr. Bunn has had considerable experience in association work and the directors feel that they could not have secured a better man for the position. For several years Mr. Bunn was secretary of the Lakewood association where he was successful. He greatly enlarged the membership of the association there and during his term as secretary the new $40,000 building was erected. For the past two years he has been connected with the International committee of the association with offices at New York. Mr. Bunn is about 48 years old and is married. He will move to Red Bank.

for your boy or girl is a contract for the purchase of a lot in or near Red Bank. We have lots which we can sell on very easy terms. A small payment can be made down and the lot paid for in small monthly or weekly payments.

Such a contract of sale will be a stimulus to any boy or girl. It will teach the value of saving and it will teach habits of thrift. Besides giving the boy or girl something really worth while, it gives a training which is of great value in itself.

South Red Bank is the only low-priced tract of land on Broad street between Red Bank and Shrewsbury which is in the market. There is no other tract on this street to be put on the market. We can sell you lots on Broad street on this tract at $225 per lot, and we will take as little as $5 down and $5 per month. We have lots on this tract, but not on Broad street, as low as $125 each. We have others at higher prices.

We believe that South Red Bank offers the greatest chance for investment or for a home site which can be found in Red Bank today. Last week a lot on Broad street, south of Bergen place, was sold for $2,500. Just think of lots on the same side of the same street, and less than five minutes' walk distant, at $225.

We have corner lots on this tract at the corner of Broad street and White avenue, and at the corner of White avenue and Munroe street, which we believe are specially good bargains. We firmly believe that within five years all lots on this tract will be worth double or more than double what we are now asking for them. We have sold twenty-one lots on this tract this season. Prices will advance next spring, and to those who want a lot for a home or for investment we advise buying at South Red Bank, and buying now.

Give your boy or girl a start by buying one of these lots.

George Cranmer Acquitted on a Charge of Assaulting Two Young Girls—Joseph Strohmenger of Rumson to Be Tried Next Month.

Ralph Carl of Long Branch, who was convicted of assaulting his adopted daughter, was sentenced to six years in state prison last Thursday week by Judge Foster. Carl's lawyer asked the court to show leniency to his client because of the conflicting stories told by the girl. The girl is thirteen years old.

George Cranmer, who was indicted on a charge of assaulting Rose Goldzeigler, seven years old, and Sarah Nossbaum, nine years old, at Elberon last August, was acquitted by a jury. Cranmer had protested his innocence since his arrest and Dr. Harry E. Shaw, who examined the girls, said the charges were unfounded.

Joseph Strohmenger pleaded not guilty to the charge of allowing liquor to be drank on his wholesale license premises at Rumson. He was released in $500 bail for trial.

C. A. Halle, who pleaded guilty to grand larceny at Atlantic Highlands, was sentenced to the Rahway reformatory.

Frank Rosso and John Thompson pleaded not guilty to the illegal sale of liquor in Neptune township. Rosso was sent back to jail in default of bail and will be tried December 14th. Thompson was released in $500 bail for trial tomorrow.

C. Irving Patterson pleaded not guilty to stealing $25 from George W. Tucker at Shrewsbury last July. He was held under $300 bail for trial tomorrow.

Nelson J. Slosson was sentenced to not more than three years and not less than a year and a half in state prison last week by Judge Foster for attempting to secure money illegally from Catherine Zeigalbalg of Asbury Park. It is said Slosson took money from the woman on a promise of securing immunity to her on a charge of selling liquor illegally.

CHRISTMAS FOX HUNT IN AMERICA

WHEN the weather is favorable on Christmas day the members of many country clubs throughout the United States engage in a fox hunt. This is the modern survival of the ancient chase that used to furnish game for the great holiday feast.

Long ago in the middle ages before the day of markets, of storage houses or refrigerator cars the lord and vassals shared the traits of the lion and scorned to eat that which they did not kill. At daybreak on the morning of the holiday the chieftain summoned the men of his clan, and to horse they went in pursuit of the wild boar. Across hills and level stretches, through swamps and across frozen streams they galloped till they came up with the fierce prey.

In the battle that ensued the privilege of the most valorous feats, of undergoing the greatest danger and of finally administering the death stroke was intrusted to the noblest. Then the body of the boar was carried back by the vassals, the body roasted and the head garnished and decorated to take the place of honor in the center of some long table laid in the center of a baronial hall.

Far into morning of the next day would the registering continue, and the poor gentleman who could drink only one bottle was destined to sad experiences in this bout of mighty bibblers.

The boar has passed from the earth. No longer does the lord kill his own Christmas feast, but in small measure he revives the joys of the holiday hunt by his pursuit of sly reynard. There are in the United States seventy first class clubs devoted to the sport of fox hunting. The season begun at Thanksgiving day is at its height by Christmastide, for then the air is crisp with frost, and the last of the crops that hunters might have damaged have been gathered into the barn and safely stored away.

For persons of wealth these are early risers who, at 7 o'clock in the morning, have gathered near the clubhouse. One comrade joins another, and a merry exchange of Christmas greetings recalls the holiday.

Trotting behind the huntsmen and the whippers-in come the hounds, now quiet and businesslike, but at the word of command ready to break into a very babble of dog noise. Horses, superb horses, strain eagerly at their bridles, anxious to bear their red coated riders off in the chase.

The master of the hounds gives his word of command, and across a cornfield the mad Christmas race starts. To the first fence comes the mad cavalcade. It is a high one. Over, under and through the bars scramble the dogs. Grandly on his horse the master takes the fence. Others follow, some not so gracefully. Some one falls, but the race goes on, all eager to reach that place where in front the hound is giving tongue.

There comes a ditch whose surface is only partly frozen, the middle having the water free. The leap is a bad one, with the footing covered with ice, but one after another the hunters put their steeds at it. Some slip and scramble, splashing seas of mud on their riders, but none cares. Too great is the joy of getting over without loss of time to worry over a couple of pounds of mud added to the weight of what the gallant horse must carry.

A level stretch is reached. The thoroughbreds are put to it to keep up with the dogs. Then come a wilder outburst of barking and the capture of a fox. The brush is taken and awarded to the lucky rider who was in at the death.

Then the party turns sedately back, the excitement of the day over. The dogs are returned to the kennel, the horses are carefully rubbed down, the participants in the hunt have their shower bath and are ready to dress for dinner after the most exciting and enjoyable start a Christmas day can well have.

Not only members of the clubs have taken part in this chase. The growing good will between farmer and hunter has turned the attention of the man of agriculture to the delights of this holiday ride. He has mounted his best horse and joined in the race. He, too, returns home to a hearty dinner to tell what a good time he had.

In less aristocratic clubs, such as the many organizations of farmers are in various parts of the country, the hunt is less ornate, but it results in more Christmas killings of foxes.

The wild, rough country of Virginia makes directly following behind the hounds a hazardous, if not impossible, performance. This gives rise to the distinctively American style of hunting, which is to let the hounds work much of the time alone, the hunter following only in spirit, catching a glimpse of the flying pack occasionally, or, guided by their musical baying, trying to catch up at the next station.

In Kentucky the Christmas hunt is held at night, on Christmas eve.

The fox hunt is an importation from England, where it still is the favorite sport of the elite at Christmas time. Virginia's early settlers first introduced the custom into the colonies, and General George Washington was one of the most famous of fox hunters. The colonial girl was educated to fox hunting as part of her accomplishments, and hundreds of the belles could take a five rail fence as easily as they cut a graceful figure in a minuet.

A Storm-Bound Christmas

By Dorothy Douglas

HAD Wallingford been anything but a wealthy bachelor and accustomed to having everything he wanted the circumstances would have seemed less of a calamity.

He had been on his way to San Francisco to spend Christmas with his favorite married sister; and midway, in the most barren desert of the country, a bridge had been swept away by winter gales. His destination could not possibly be reached until Christmas was well over.

Wallingford cast a glance out over the wide stretch of rolling plains with only a few scattered shacks to break their endless waste; and then he looked back to his bulging suit case. The latest and most wonderful toys he could find in the city shops were crowded into that bag, for his sister's only boy. Then, not caring whether or not a highwayman might be looking in at the window of the parlor car, he took a small box from his waistcoat pocket and looked sorrowfully at a ring from which three exquisite diamonds flashed back at him.

Wallingford leaned back in his chair and in imagination pictured his sister's joy when slipping that ring on her finger. He could hear her scold him for his extravagance and chaff him for having no one else for whom to buy such baubles. He sighed and returned it to his pocket much as he might have cast it to the depths of the sea; it would do him as much good there as it would in his pocket under the present circumstances.

Wallingford was reconciled to a Christmas dinner over a lunch counter when his eye caught the name of Yankville. Yankville, probably boasted a near-thousand inhabitant, yet Yankville also suggested the name of Everly—Jack Everly. When Wallingford had last heard of Jack Everly the latter was located in Yankville. That was some eighteen months before, but there was no reason why he should not be there still.

It seemed that everyone in Yankville knew the Everly homestead. It was the only one of any proportions in the village.

The red glow from an open fire within cheered Wallingford's numbed faculties as he rang the bell at the Everly door.

On the face of her who opened the door, surprise was the principal expression. For, Wallingford, his six-feet-two encased in a great fur coat all dangling with glistening snow beads and his handsome glowing face looking frankly into her own, was a surprise for any eyes.

She did not wait for him to explain his errand but with the matron's privilege of hospitality invited him into the warmth of the house.

"It was too cold to stand outside," she explained and waited for his question.

"I am Bob Wallingford," he began meeting the easy cordial expression of her blue eyes. "I am one of the belated passengers of the bridge tie-up and decided to run over and see if Jack Everly would take pity on an old friend and—"

"Jack Everly left Yankville," a smile played about her lips at mention of the illustrious village, "some six or seven months ago—"

Embarrassment, disappointment and surprise mingled equally in Wallingford's face and did not escape the eyes of Sylvia Vale. She spoke with ready tact.

"Take off that great coat, anyway, and come into the fireside. It's no night to be out."

Wallingford followed the slim gray-clad figure in a decidedly chaotic state of mind. Mingled with his embarrassment at having walked into an absolute stranger's house, was the sudden attraction he felt for this girl with the sun-lit hair. Something—the combination perhaps—was making him feel like a tongue-tied schoolboy. It was a most unusual state of mind for Bob Wallingford.

There was a patter of little feet and a tiny boy of three years threw himself into Wallingford's arms.

"Oh-h! Are you Santa Claus?" he cried gleefully. "I heard your sleigh bells and saw your big fuzzy coat! Mamma, isn't he Santa Claus?"

The child's mother would have spoken but Wallingford's eyes pleaded for silence.

"You young rascal! You caught old Santy this time, didn't you? And he came especially to find out what you wanted him to bring down the chimney—"

"Wallingford! How in the name of all that's possible did you get here?" Dick Elkins, an old chum of New York days, stood in the doorway and held out a glad hand of welcome.

A weight of relief fell from Wallingford's shoulders. He was no longer a stranger in a strange house. And did you all will accept, without protest, the Christmas gifts which I brought for my sister and her family—without question."

There was a moment's silence and the promise was made, laughingly.

"But we will have to return the favor," brother and sister spoke as one voice.

So it was decided.

"Too bad Vale couldn't get here," remarked Elkins, later in the evening when, the small boy having been tucked into bed, the three sat about the blazing fire.

"Yes—we would have made a jolly quartet," said Sylvia.

Wallingford was almost guilty of a gasp. The calm, unconcerned way in which she remarked that her husband would have completed a quartet on Christmas eve had he been able to get there, was rather disconcerting.

Dick Elkins arose and left the room to get the boy's toys.

"Bring down the suitcase in my room," cried Wallingford. He was as excited as a boy.

"You will not regret having promised to accept what I had bought for my sister?" Wallingford leaned slightly toward Sylvia's gray dress and through the strands of her golden hair, and the man in him had a struggle before quenching the light in his own eyes. It was the girl herself who was unable to hide a tremor.

"I promise," she said unsteadily. "But it seems—odd."

Dick returned, staggering under a load of toys. Then they all jumped gladly into the spirit of Christmas.

"When my husband was living," said Sylvia as she pinned up a tiny

Invited Him Into the Warmth of the House.

stocking, "he always spoke of the day when he could do this——" The end of her sentence was drowned in the clatter of a huge box of blocks dropping to the hearthstone.

"Cheer up," said Wallingford; "wooden blocks don't break."

He stooped to pick the fallen toys and wondered if the woman pinning up the stocking beside him heard the thumping of his heart. A small box found its way into Sylvia's hand.

"Mrs. Vale, I can't keep this another minute," Wallingford said.

"Oh, I say!" exclaimed Dick when the flashing diamond ring was unwrapped. "You shouldn't expect to make sis take——"

"You promised." The eyes of the two men met and Elkins knew then and there what Wallingford's lips would speak.

With two of the oposite sex against her Sylvia had little chance to demur and with a tingling sensation in every nerve she slipped the ring on her right hand.

It was late the next night when the child had again been tucked in bed to dream of a wonderful day in the kingdom of toys with three grown up people to play with him, that the three again sat about the open fire.

"I never spent a happier Christmas," said Wallingford with a glad ring in his voice.

"Nor I," put in Dick. "Vale missed a good time all right," he added sleepily. "Sis and her brother-in-law are quite smitten." And unaware of the havoc he had created in Wallingford's heart he took his departure for bed, leaving the two in silence.

But the silence was a complete one—one in which spoken words and thoughts were unnecessary. After a moment Wallingford leaned forward and compelled Sylvia's eyes and while he did so he took her right hand and removed the ring and put it firmly on the third finger of her left hand.

"Next Christmas," he said tenderly, "we will spend at our own fireside. It is all very sudden and very wonderful, Sylvia, but I always do important things suddenly and—love is always wonderful."

CHRISTMAS GAMES

Tricks With Sheets to Divert the Christmas Company

A SHEET should always be provided for children's Christmas games. Arranged as a screen it serves many purposes besides shadow pictures and lantern shows.

Two capital games are played in this manner. For one an opening about six inches wide should be cut in the sheet at a convenient height for different persons to stand and show only their eyes. No light should be back of the sheet, and the company seated in front must guess whose eyes are staring at them.

A variation of this idea may be even more amusing because it affords opportunity for misleading the guessers. Instead of an opening the sheet is drawn up a few inches from the floor in order to show the feet of those who stand behind it. Boys can cleverly put on skirts, and girls slip their hands into their fathers' shoes, setting down on all fours in order to deceive.

Another mirth providing trick for children of all ages and one that will be heartily appreciated by adults is called mesmerism. Blacken the center of the under side of a small plate by holding it over the flame of a candle, being careful not to spoil the edge or top. Put this plate upon another and place them in front of you. The person to be mesmerized must be seated so that by no possibility can he see his reflection in the glass, but must be in full view of the audience.

The mesmerist says impressively: "You must look me steadily in the eye all the time. Don't remove your eyes an instant from my face, but do just as I do slowly—see (picking up the blackened plate and handing it to the victim so that the black is toward the spectators). Hold it so (taking up the other plate and holding it with the concave side toward himself). Now this way (rubbing his finger round and round the back of the clean plate and the one who is mesmerized drawing his round the blackened one unconscious of its condition), now so (drawing the finger down the right cheek). Never mind how they laugh. You must not look down. Steady. Now again" (rubbing the finger as before and drawing it across the other cheek). The operation may be repeated until the face of the one mesmerized presents a most comical appearance and the audience is convulsed with laughter.

SNIGGLE THE SPRIG.

"Sniggle the sprig" means simply snare or catch the sprig. Any bit of green plant will do for the latter, and any number of children can play the game. Some one who is not playing hides the sprig, and all search for it. When found it has to be carried to a fancifully trimmed pole and tied there. This is no easy matter, for the sprig must first go through the hands of every player, and it is every one's aim to catch it before it reaches the pole. No attempt to do this can be made, however, until the sprig has returned to the hands of the finder and that player is running for the goal.

In the midst of the general search, when the finder has found the sprig, he approaches his nearest neighbor and quietly hands it to him. At the same time he gives his neighbor No. 2, which means that this one is the second person to hold it. The latter in turn as carefully passes it on and numbers this player a unit higher. So the game goes on until the last of the players has held the sprig. This one knows that he is the last, for the reason that before the game began a count was taken, and each participant knows just how many persons are taking part.

When the number is given to each player the first name of the finder is whispered also. As soon as the last player receives the sprig he passes it to the finder, who at once runs for the goal with it. All follow and give chase except the last player, who is not permitted to run.

In the scrimmage that follows the sprig may be snatched a dozen times. That one is victor who succeeds in placing it on the pole. Should it be the finder, then his triumph will have been so much the greater, for he will have had the most difficulties to overcome in doing this.

A CAROL CONTEST.

A carol contest affords exercise and fun. A young lady is requested to take her place at the piano and play gay Christmas music. Some chairs are placed down the center of the room, back to back, just one less in number than the players. Suppose there are twelve children to play. You place eleven chairs, ten back to back, one extra. Then the twelve children dance hand in hand around the chairs in time to the music.

Suddenly—sometimes in the middle of a bar always just when you do not expect it—the player lifts her hands off the piano. Everybody must then attempt to get a seat, and, as there are only eleven, one person will, of course, be left out. She or he is then out of the game and must sit down and watch it.

Then a chair is taken away, ten being left. The dancers resume their dance as soon as the music begins. The moment it stops they try to get a chair each, and one is, of course, again left out. Then another chair is taken away and the dance resumed.

The game goes on, losing a dancer and a chair each time, till two dancers and one chair only are left. Then the two dance wildly around the chair, and when the music suddenly stops one sits down, and the other is "out," like the rest.

IVY AND HOLLY.

A Rhymed Game For the Older Boys and Girls.

Boys and girls enjoy a rhymed pastime called ivy and holly. Suggest the plan of it to them and they will amuse themselves with the adventures of the two heroines for quite awhile.

Chairs are arranged in two rows, and the children sit facing each other. One youngster begins with some adventure, as "Holly and Ivy went out to a party." The child sitting opposite must complete the rhyme with another couplet—for instance, "Holly and Ivy came back hale and hearty."

Then there is the fun provoking couplet called dramatic adjectives. Here the company is divided up into two bands, one of which retires, while the other remains in the parlor and decides upon some adjective to be acted out in pantomime—for example, merry or doleful or vivacious. When the word has been decided upon the absent members must be summoned, and they are called upon to guess from the pantomime of the others what the adjective decided upon may be. If they can guess it in five minutes a point is won by their side, and the other withdraws. After three rounds the pantomime can be kept up if the opposition is determined to have the right word, but a success of two rounds represents a point won. As soon as the word is guessed players again about, and those who have acted become actors. Several rounds are played, and the greatest number of points won by either side wins the game. All those who belong to the winning side might draw for a prize if it is desired to make an award.

HURRAH FOR SNAPDRAGON!

An Old Game That Always Commands Applause.

Snapdragon is a diversion of Christmas time in England. The requisites are one or two large platters such as roasts are served on, some large, fat raisins, a little brandy or gin, a match and a darkened room. The platters are arranged thus: If there is but one and the party is of moderate number it is laid in the center of a dining table; if the number of players is large, then two platters are laid, one at each end of the table, or there may be two small tables, with a platter on each. Next the raisins are laid over each platter, singly and at short distances apart. A small quantity of brandy or gin is then poured over each platter and lighted. Out go all the lights in the room, leaving none but that from the dancing blue flames in the platters. Everybody shivers and feels uncanny, and the fun begins. Each player "snaps" at a raisin on the dish, and, hit or miss, the blue flame clings to the fingers in writhing, forked tongues, thus providing the "dragon." The raisins are all finally secured, the flames die out, the lights are turned on, and the company is ready for other amusements unless, as is often the case, there is a call to repeat the fun just ended.

A SUGAR PLUM SHOWER.

Scrambling For These Dainties a Jolly Romp.

Make a large bag of thin white paper, fill it with sugar plums and tie a string around the top to keep it fast. Then suspend it from the ceiling or from a large door frame and provide a long, light stick.

Each child is blindfolded in turn and the stick put into the child's hand. She is led within reach of the bag and told to strike it. If she succeeds in her aim and tears a hole in it the sugar plums are scattered on the floor, and the little ones scramble for them, but it is by no means easy to strike a suspended object blindfolded. Generally many attempts are made unsuccessfully.

Each child is allowed three trials. The maker of the bag can put in it tiny books, pincushions or any little toy with the sugar plums. An older person should always superintend in order that everything may go smoothly.

A SEARCH GAME.

Hunting Holly Leaves All Over the House.

For a pretty Christmas search game, which young children as well as the older boys and girls enjoy, cut several hundred little holly leaves from green tinted paper and hide them all round the house. At a given signal the young people scamper off in search of these symbols of the season.

The youngster finding the greatest number of them in the ten minutes allowed for the search should receive some inexpensive prize decorated with a design representing holly.

On Christmas Morn.

They fared across the lonely plains,
They dared the desert way.
Above them moved the starry trains
That rest not night or day.
One star from out the splendor shone,
A rift of heaven's own light.
In fearless faith they followed on,
Their eager faces bright.

Three kings were they of great renown,
And from the east afar
Until it stood o'er Bethlehem town
They journeyed by the star.
It stood above a cattle shed,
And there its light grew dim.
To heaven's own Child the star had led.
Its glory paled for him.

Immanuel! A little Child
That very day newborn.
They knelt before the undefiled
That earliest Christmas morn.
Each head was bent to give him praise.
Their incense, gold and myrrh
They offered him in glad amaze
Each humble worshiper.

What gifts have we for Christ today?
We, too, have seen the star,
And we have found the happy way
To Bethlehem afar.
Our gold, our myrrh, our incense sweet,
Shall we not bither bring?
Ah, let us kneel to kiss his feet,
The little Christ, our King!

SANTA IN ALL LANDS

The One Legend That no Higher Teaching Can Down.

He Was Known as Saint Nicholas and Gained His Reputation Through Love of Children—As He Is Pictured in Different Countries.

Santa Claus is the one myth that will not down.

The tradition of a beneficent spirit—call him by what name you will, Santa Claus, Kriss Kringle, St. Nicholas, Father Christmas or Noel—who comes around on December 25 of each year and gladdens the heart of children, rich or poor, by mysteriously leaving them the very things they most want, survives in spite of all attacks.

The so-called higher criticism has attacked many familiar stories of religion. Historians, too, have told us that the story of the cherry tree and George Washington's hatchet is rankest nonsense, and some of us have been convinced. But when the iconoclast tries to shake the children's faith in the existence of Santa Claus he bumps his head against a wall of absolute faith.

"No Santa Claus?" a million childish voices would echo, "why, every Christmas brings the proof that there is one."

And that ends the argument.

Santa Claus, the real Santa Claus, is both old and young.

His picture shows us a jolly fellow with a beard suggesting the venerable, twinkling eyes bespeaking bounding youth. And young in spirit and in action, if not in years, he must be to get over all the world in one night.

He is different in every country, ranging in years from the beautiful Christ child that the good children of France adore to the jolly old fellow to whom the American youngster vows allegiance.

His present name, Santa Claus, or Kris Kringle, is derived from St. Nicholas, the very incarnation of all that was good and generous.

St. Nicholas, destined to be worshipped in various forms by the children of scores of centuries, was born in Patara, a town of Lycia, in Asia Minor. From his earliest days he showed a religious inclination that destined him to take a high place in the Church.

While St. Nicholas became famous in the councils of the Church, it was still more as the special friend of the children that his fame spread. One of his earliest miracles had to do with restoring to life two or three children. There are two accounts of the story. One says that an Asian sent his two sons to Athens to study. En route they fell in with a villainous innkeeper, who, to get their valuables, slew the two boys, and cut their bodies into bits, which he put in his brine barrel. Then St. Nicholas, having seen the crime in a vision, came to the spot, and restored the children to life. The other version says there were three children, and that their would-be murderer was a butcher.

In either case St. Nicholas performed the miracle of restoring them to life. This was the first act by which St. Nicholas proved his love for children. The second bore still more strongly on the Santa Claus idea, for it was a favor that he did at Christmas time.

The idea of St. Nicholas was so beautiful that it took its place among the great beliefs of the children, and in different forms it is found nearly every century. Both his name and his form differ, but everywhere his labor is the same.

In France, Germany, Russia and the Netherlands he is the embodiment of an essentially religious idea, but in England and the United States his office is more a secular one.

France always represents Noel as the infant Jesus, and in Germany, too, the name Krist Kindel, corrupted here into Kriss Kringle, means literally the Christ child.

In France the little benefactor, who slips in the homes of the poor, and leaves gifts that would be far beyond the power of their parents to buy, is an inspiration to the youngster.

In Central Europe, where the Christ Child is believed to come with gifts for the little one, the good saint is dressed like a maiden, carrying a silver bell, lighted tapers and wearing a crown.

Belgium's children think that he comes on a white horse. They polish their little shoes and leave in them carrots and hay and oats, so that the horse can be refreshed when he pauses over and anon for a brief minute's rest.

St. Nicholas carries the same name in Holland that he does in America—Santa Claus. In Switzerland, they call him Sama Klaus, and in Heligoland, Bonner Klaus.

He is Nikio or Niglo in Austria, and boasts the luxury of an attendant, who assists him in carrying all his bundles. This assistant to Santa Claus is known as Krampus, and with the children is only a shade less popular than his chief.

"Holy Man" in the respectful form by which the patron Saint is known in the Tyrol, and here, too, he has assistance, being accompanied by the Christ Child and St. Lucy. The Christ Child himself comes in Alsace.

Even Japan has a Santa Claus, similar in most respects to the Santa Claus of the Occident. He is known as the "Sage of Long Life."

The Christmas Dinner

The illustration shows a rather elaborate way of arranging the Christmas table, but it has good points, which may be followed out even by the housewife whose family is small and who favors simplicity. For instance, the chrysanthemums may be used in a very small cluster, and if the real flowers are not to be had excellent imitations may be made of crape paper. The sherbet served in the tall glasses may be tinted a delicate green and topped by candied cherries. It will then be the true Christmas colors. If candle shades are used they should be of green, with red ribbons or sprigs of holly.

Another effective decoration for the Christmas table is in a color scheme of red and green. The table is crossed in the center with two streamers composed of evergreens and red carnations, which extend to the corners. Attached to each end is an evergreen wreath, which falls in the form of a horseshoe. This corner decoration is necessarily wired to give it the desired effect. Placed in the center is a tall vase of green Bohemian glass filled with large red carnations.

Fruited and bright flowered plants are attractively potted for table decoration and window box adornment. Euphorbia poinsettia, with its bright scarlet leaves flaunting from a background of green, makes a brilliant bit of ornamentation. It is particularly beautiful in December and is a highly prized Christmas plant. The dwarf orange trees, with their abundance of small golden fruit and dark green leaves, are highly ornamental. They are a hardy growth and with care may be kept in good condition for a considerable time and made to do duty in various schemes of interior decoration for the holiday festivities.

ABOUT DESSERTS.

Christmas Dainties Appropriate as Well as Toothsome.

When it comes to the final course of the Christmas dinner, the dessert, then all laws are broken.

In every home there are dishes renowned, if not for generations, certainly for the ability of the hostess.

These may range from plum pudding to snow pudding, from mince pie to doughnuts, from hot sweets to ices. They are known as family dishes. To displace them from their position of honor upon the family table would be like removing the slippers from the hearthstone.

Newly married housewives who are a little timid can try an almond dessert, an apple and rice dish or can arrange a pretty glass bowl of fruit in a new way. It will be eaten and called good, no matter what it be—you may be sure of that—on this the first Christmas of married life.

To the young housekeeper who attempts a Christmas dinner let this advice be given: Season your dishes with care, not tears. And, if your household help be limited to one small though willing maid, confine your courses to three—soup, meat and dessert—and serve them without regard to the detail which must characterize the more mature feast of later housewifely winters. If you are an experienced housewife prepare your feast with the confidence of years. If it fails you, remember that they know perfectly well, one and all, that you are, head and shoulders, the best cook of the family.

His Christmas Caller

By Anna S. Richardson

THE store fairly radiated the Christmas spirit. Crimson bells swung from every chandelier. Ropes of evergreen draped all the shelving. The counters were strewn with Christmas cards, booklets and favors.

The man who had dropped in to buy lead points for his pocket pencil remained to pore over a stack of gift books bound in rare leather. Then he heard the voice. After that only his gaze was on the books. His interest was concentrated on the possessor of the voice.

"But you said such things were in great demand around the holidays, and

"I SHOULD LIKE TO TAKE A LOOK AT THOSE CARDS."

I have taken infinite pains with these. Please, please tell me what is wrong with them."

There was a note of tragedy in the rich contralto tones which, together with a beseeching glance from wonderful violet eyes, put to rout the rules and regulations of the astute buyer of Christmas novelties. His was a smart shop, and he had never vouchsafed explanation to struggling young artists whose work he declined to sell on commission, but now he picked up the little packets of plate and score cards, gay with holly, Santa Claus heads, etc.

"Let me explain," he said. "These are not novelties. They are the same style of cards used in the past twenty years, with the same decorations. Women who can afford to pay the prices demanded for hand painted novelties want something new. See this poinsettia blossom—not painted on a card, but cut in the shape of the blossom itself—and this funny, bulging stocking, overflowing with faces of pretty girls, for a bachelor. They are catchy, the sort of things my customers want. Your work is neat, but not novel."

"Thank you," the girl said bravely. "I understand now, and it is too late for me to try my hand at novelties. But perhaps you will keep my cards, and I—well, your novelties might not go around, and then perhaps some late customer might buy mine after all."

"Certainly. I will be glad to keep them in reserve. Your name and address—oh, yes, I remember—Miss Sylvia Leigh, the Grant studios. I will do my best for you."

Nevertheless as the girl slipped through the door he opened a deep drawer under the counter and dropped the cards out of sight. It would never do to display those old fashioned bits of pasteboard among the novelties which appealed to his fashionable trade. And then very suddenly the man who had been engrossed in leather bound gift books stepped up to the counter.

"One minute, please. I should like to take a look at those cards you just bought from the young lady."

The astonished manager of the store glanced from the well groomed man with fine brown eyes and iron gray hair to the more expensive novelties in the showcase.

"The ones you just bought from the young lady," repeated the customer serenely.

"Certainly," responded the manager hastily, and he spread forth the despised bits of pasteboard. The work was dainty, but utterly commonplace.

"Just what my sister would like—conservative sort of woman my sister is; don't go in for newfangled ideas. I'll take these three dozen. Not enough! Do you suppose the girl could do two dozen more by the day before Christmas? If she can, send 'em to me, James Macy, at Marquette. I'll take these with me."

And almost before he could realize what had happened the manager was actually gaping, open mouthed, after this eccentric customer whose order was to give a dinner party of sixty covers on Christmas day and intrusted the buying of such important articles as dinner favors to an obviously inexperienced bachelor brother.

Christmas eve was frosty and starlit. James Macy, coming home from his office, smiled somewhat grimly at the holiday preparations made.

Holly and evergreens there were in plenty, great wreaths with massive bows of satin ribbon, a bowl filled with scarlet poinsettia blooms, and on one table an orderly stack of parcels evidently sent by express, mail and messenger to the popular but elusive bachelor, for elusive he was dubbed by matchmaking mothers.

"A young lady to see you, sir," remarked his man impressively.

James Macy took the card.

"Miss Sylvia Leigh," ran the legend.

She came to him, looking taller than she day in the shop, for her head was held high.

"You will pardon my coming here on Christmas eve and unchaperoned I could not leave town without seeing you." The violet eyes had turned almost black; the contralto voice was a bit too even in its tones.

"I am honored," replied James Macy gravely, and he offered her a chair, which she declined with a wave of her gloved hand.

"It was hard enough to know that the man who bought my foolish little paintings did it through a sense of pity, but to learn that he was also the man who wrecked my mother's life—that—that was too much. I have come to return your money and ask the return of my cards if you have not already destroyed them."

"My dear girl," expostulated the man, who had turned strangely white.

"Please do not interrupt me," continued the girl passionately. "My mother's brother—perhaps you remember him—Henry Johnson, is here. He went to the shop and found out where my cards had gone and— Oh, it is such a miserable little farce to you, a successful man! I thought I could be an artist. They told me so at home. Against uncle's wishes I came here to make my little fight and failed. When you bought those things I thought perhaps—but uncle, who wanted me to go home, sifted the story to the bottom and found—you. I am going home with him tonight."

"Miss Leigh, I want to beg a favor of you. This is Christmas eve, and I am a lonely, desolate man. If ever the Christmas message of peace and good will means anything it is tonight, and I want your good will. Those little Christmas cards you painted are the only touch of real Christmas that has come into my life—and I want to keep them—and tell you why I want to keep them. Will you be seated?

"You say I wrecked your mother's life. Well, then, know that hers was not long. My season of regret and penitence has lasted longer than you have lived. I loved your mother, but I did not understand her. I went out into the world to make a fortune, not for myself, but for her, and I thought that the fortune must come first and love's dream afterward. With women it is different. The dream must come first—the fortune is a secondary consideration. Your mother (God bless her memory) thought I had forgotten—that I did not care—and so she passed out of my life and into your father's.

"But she had you. I had nothing, nothing but money and the memory of one happy summer of her life. I never expected to know what peace and happiness meant again until that day in the store, when your eyes, your voice—I thought it was the other Sylvia, my Sylvia, come to life. And I bought those cards because you painted them.

"And now you come to me in anger and take from me my one Christmas happiness—the work of your hands. Sylvia, Sylvia, haven't I paid my debt of repentance? Can you not extend forgiveness—Christmas forgiveness—in your mother's name?"

"I AM HONORED," REPLIED JAMES MACY.

Sylvia turned toward the door.

"I must go now. We are leaving on the 9 o'clock train. Uncle is waiting for me downstairs in a cab. We are going home."

"Home!" The man echoed the word mechanically, dully.

The girl hesitated, then held out her hand.

"Yes, back to dear old Hestonville. Why don't you come too? Why don't you run out tomorrow—for dinner?"

"Sylvia, child, do you mean it? Do you understand that if I come it will be to see you?"

Bravely the violet eyes were raised to meet the searching look in the brown ones.

"Is it peace and good will for me, Sylvia?"

"Yes and merry Christmas if you come tomorrow."

THE NATIVITY

NINE WILLS PROBATED.

JAMES DOWD LEAVES ESTATE TO NIECES AND NEPHEWS.

Mrs. Mary Nelson of Navesink Leaves All of Her Property to Her Daughter —Keyport Man Wills Estate to Wife —Other Monmouth County Wills.

James Dowd of New Monmouth, who died about two months ago, made his will four years ago last September, appointing his nephew, Patrick J. Devine, sole executor. Mr. Dowd left $500 to his nephew, John H. Dowd of Broadbrook, Connecticut, and $500 to his niece, Mary C. O'Brien of Bennington, Vermont; and he left $1,000 to his nephew, Joseph E. Dowd of Bristol, New Hampshire. He left $5 to his nephew, Frank P. Dowd of Broadbrook, Connecticut, and $500 to his nephew, Thomas Dowd, of Clune Chimney, Ireland. Rev. John Murray, rector of the Catholic church at New Monmouth, was left $100 to be used in the celebration of masses for Mr. Dowd. Mr. Dowd's house and lot were left to his nephew, James Dowd of Centerville, with the stipulation that his father act as his guardian until he becomes of age. Mr. Dowd bequeathed one-half of a $1,200 mortgage on Michael Dowd's place to his nephew, William J. Dowd of Springfield, Massachusetts, on condition that he should not demand the mortgage as long as the interest was paid on it and that he should accept payments of not less than $50 each on the principal. All the rest of Mr. Dowd's estate was bequeathed to his niece, Nellie J. Devine of Broadbrook, Connecticut, and if the rest of the estate did not amount to $1,000 Mr. Dowd directed that his other bequests be reduced proportionately to make up the required sum. Marcus B. and Eugenia S. Taylor and Anna Antonides of Keyport witnessed the will.

Left Estate to Daughter.

Mrs. Mary Nelson, widow of Gordon Nelson of Navesink, made her will five years ago last June. Mrs. Nelson appointed William Bridle executor of her will. She directed that all of her debts be paid as soon as possible after her death. All the rest of her estate was left to her daughter, Mrs. Elmira Pintard.

Wife Gets Estate.

Peter Force of Keyport made his will fifteen years ago. He appointed his wife, Hannah H. Force, executor of his will and left her his entire estate for her use as long as she lives and after her death the property will go to her children. Dr. O. C. Bogardus and David Warner witnessed the will.

Cliffwood Man's Will.

August Kortenhouse of Cliffwood appointed his wife, Jennie Kortenhouse, sole executrix of his will which was made last month. He left his entire estate to his wife and her heirs absolutely. The will was witnessed by Josephine A. Hoff of Keyport and J. Clarence Conover of Freehold.

Left His Property to Wife.

Joseph N. Flannigan, proprietor of a hotel at Long Branch, who died about three weeks ago, made his will last June. Mr. Flannigan appointed his wife, Annie Flannigan, executrix of his will and left her his entire estate, with the statement that he felt confident that she would properly educate and care for his children. John W. Wilson and John W. Slocum of Long Branch witnessed the will.

Mrs. Josephine E. Woolley's Will.

Mrs. Josephine E. Woolley of Long Branch made her will a year ago last March. She appointed her son, Harry G. Woolley, executor. Mrs. Woolley left $50 to her son, John W. Woolley, and $100 to a friend, Rachel Smith. She left her gold watch to her grandson, Albert G. Woolley, and all the rest of her jewelry was bequeathed to her granddaughter, Ida Daly Woolley. The rest of her estate was left to her son, Harry G. Woolley, and his wife. The witnesses to the will were Carrie N. Finn and John W. Slocum of Long Branch.

Will of Long Branch Woman.

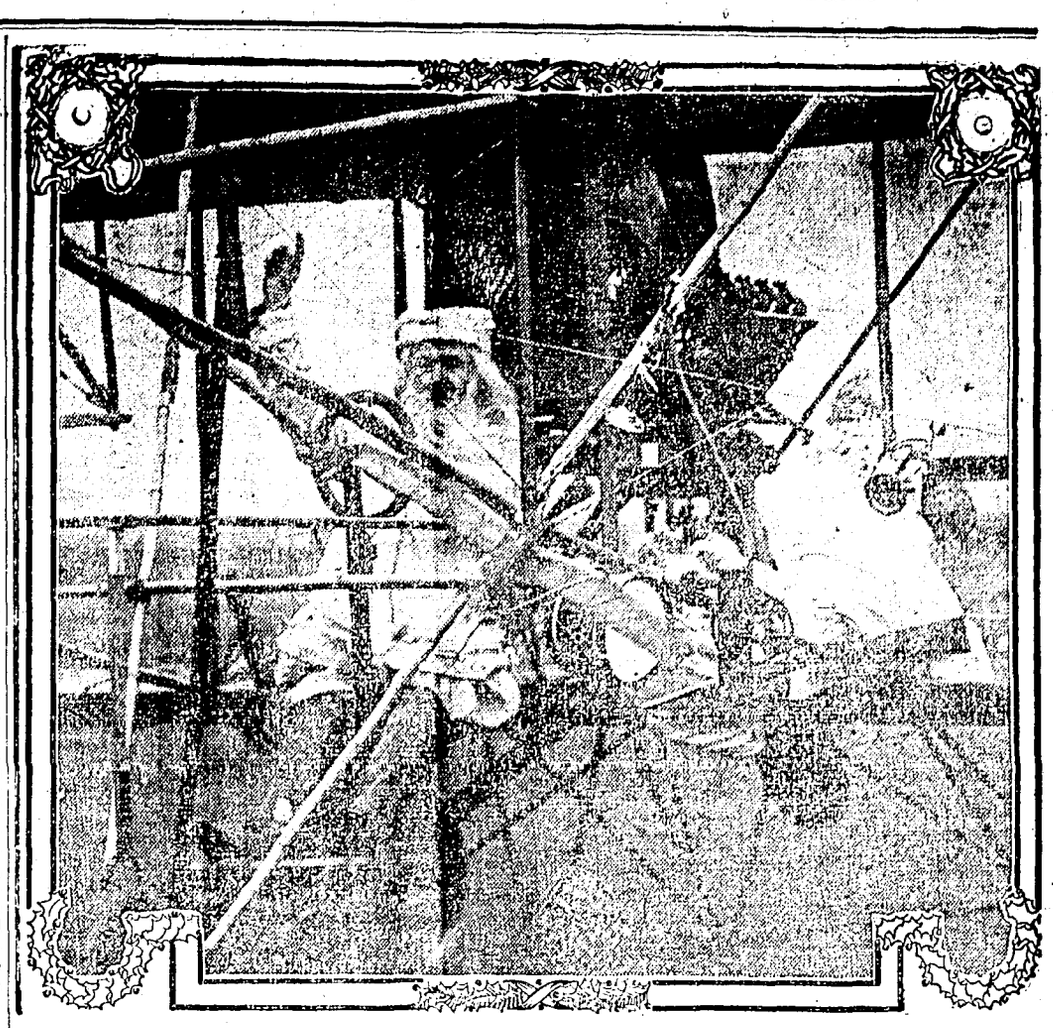
Mrs. Eva B. Emmons of Long Branch made her will last October. She left $1 each to her sons, John E. Emmons and Ambrose Emmons. All the rest of her property was left to her daughter, Eva B. Emmons, in recognition of her care of Mrs. Emmons and her husband. Susan A. Goodwin, Delora Crawshaw and Lizzie B. Emmons witnessed the will.

Will of a Wealthy Widow.

Harriet T. Leavenworth of Asbury Park, widow of General Elias W. Leavenworth of Asbury Park, made her will two years ago. The will was witnessed by L. E. Hetrick and Edmund E. Dayton of Asbury Park. Mrs. Leavenworth appointed the commercial trust company of New Jersey executor and trustee of her will. Mrs. Leavenworth left all of her clothing, jewelry and personal effects to her son, David A. Ball, with the direction that he dispose of them according to her wishes which had been made known to him. All of her household furniture which was stored at Jersey City, was bequeathed to her son, David A. Ball and his wife, Jennie M. Ball, share and share alike. A piece of salt meadow land near Newark was left to David A. Ball. Mrs. Leavenworth left $2,500 to her daughter, Maria B. Wolff, to be paid to her at the death of David A. Ball. All the rest of her estate was left to her trustee to be held in trust for David A. Ball and his wife and the income to be paid to them in equal shares. In case Mrs. Leavenworth's children die without leaving any heirs the money was willed to several charitable institutions. In a codicil to the will which was made last August, Mrs. Leavenworth revoked the bequests to the charitable institutions. Mrs. Leavenworth said that her reason for doing this was because her husband had placed more than half of his fortune in trust for Yale and Syracuse universities and Hamilton college and she did wish to change her husband's bequests.

Left Houses to Nieces.

Mary J. Tichenor of Bradley Beach made her will two years ago last September, appointing William Wagner executor. Mr. Tichenor left a house and lot at Bradley Beach to her niece, Mary Williams, and an adjoining house and lot to her niece, Grace Williams. She also left to Mary Williams all the contents in the house which she bequeathed her, a three-stone diamond ring and one of her diamond earrings. Grace Williams was left all the contents of the house which was willed to her and the other of her aunt's diamond earrings. Mrs. Tichenor left a solitaire diamond ring to her granddaughter, Marion Tichenor; a diamond breastpin to her sister, Margaret, and $5 to her son, Millard Tichenor. All of the rest of her estate was left to her niece, Mary Williams. The will was witnessed by Alonzo T. Severs and John H. Hackman of Bradley Beach.



LICENSED POOL ROOMS.

COMMISSIONERS TO REGULATE THE POOL ROOM BUSINESS AT RED BANK.

Ordinance to be Introduced at the Next Meeting of the Council—Town Fathers Will not Interfere in Trouble Over a Bulkhead Between Charles Irwin and the Steamboat Company—William Rose Wins His Fight for a Reducton in His Tax.

Proprietors of pool rooms in operation at Red Bank will have to receive licenses from the commissioners in order to do business according to an ordinance to be introduced at the next meeting of the commissioners. The ordinance was ordered drawn at Monday night's council meeting. John S. Applegate, Jr., drew the attention of the board to the necessity of regulating pool rooms. He spoke about the management of a pool room in the Grote building on Front street. This place is run by a colored man. Mr. Applegate said that the manner of conducting the pool room was bad and that the place might become a hotbed of crime. He said he doubted if the commissioners would allow such a place to be operated if they had the power of granting licenses. No sum was fixed for the license fee in the ordinance, and it was agreed to settle this matter later. Both Mr. Applegate and the commissioners agreed that the matter of revenue was secondary, the principal object being that of regulation.

Coats for Firemen.

James R. Wolcott, chief of the fire department, asked for 26 rubber coats for the firemen. It was decided to buy the coats and to advertise for bids on them.

Sprinkling Bills Reduced.

Collector William M. Thompson was granted authority to cut in half the sprinkling bills of South street residents. The bills will be reduced because the street was sprinkled only part of the summer.

Light on Leighton Avenue.

An incandescent light was ordered placed on the west side of Leighton avenue, between Leonard and Herbert streets. A petition asking for this improvement was presented at the meeting.

Want Assessments Reduced.

The sewer committee was ordered to investigate claims made by L. E. Brown, Jacob Kridel and Mrs. Lafayette Hurley that they had been assessed for more sewer benefits on their Shrewsbury avenue properties than they had received.

Fines of $17.75.

James H. Sickles, the borough recorder, turned in fines of $17.75 collected during November.

Tax Reduced.

A reduction of $35.08 was made in William Rose's tax. This was for sewer pipes laid by Mr. Rose, which he claimed the town should have done.

Town's Bonded Debt.

Mr. Thompson was instructed at the next meeting of the commissioners to make a written report of the town's bonded indebtedness.

Trouble Over a Bulkhead.

Charles Irwin is building a bulkhead at his property on the river front which the commissioners talked over at considerable length. The bulkhead will be about two feet higher than the land. Drain water from Broad street runs into Mr. Irwin's boat basin, but the bulkhead will cut this off and will force the water on the lands of the steamboat company.

The drain pipes used to run on the steamboat property, but about twenty years ago were moved to Mr. Irwin's lands. Mr. Irwin claims that because of the drain water emptying on his land he has had to make repairs to the amount of $1,200. The steamboat company's officials say that they look to the town officials to regulate the matter and keep Mr. Irwin from flooding their property. The commissioners on Monday night took the stand that the affair was a personal one between Mr. Irwin and the company and that it was not in their province to interfere in the matter.

Uncollectable Taxes.

Mr. Thompson was relieved of collecting $1,311.53 in taxes. This sum is classed as uncollectable taxes and consists principally of personal taxes and poll taxes of persons who have died or moved away.

CHRISTMAS TREE FUND.

Independent Fire Company Receiving Contributions for the Fund.

The Tuebor society of the Independent fire company met last week. At the meeting the committees reported that a lot of favorable work had been accomplished during the past week toward the company's public Christmas tree fund. The Red Bank lodge of Elks has donated $100 to the fund. Other contributions have been promised and these will be acknowledged from time to time. Donations of clothing, fuel and food will be appreciated by the firemen. Following the meeting the firemen had a supper at the firehouse.

RACES ON THANKSGIVING

A SERIES OF TROTS ON THE FAIR GROUNDS LAST THURSDAY.

Pot Roast, Owned by William Morris of Long Branch, Cleaned Up Fred L. and Hi Henry—About 250 Persons Saw the Races.

About 250 persons attended the trotting races on the fair grounds at Red Bank Thanksgiving afternoon. The races were gotten up by B. Albert Parker. Mr. Parker didn't make much money on the affair, but he did not arrange the race with the idea of making a big profit. Some of the owners of fast horses in the county were anxious to try out conclusions, and it was more to accommodate the desires of these men than anything else that the races were held.

The first race was the best. This was between "Pot Roast," owned by William Morris of Long Branch, "Fred L.," owned by Luther & Stapleton of Colt's Neck, and "Hi Henry," owned by Henry Muhlenbrink of Long Branch. The horses finished in the order named, Mr. Morris's entry winning three straight heats. The prize was a set of Moody's harness valued at $25.

The 2:30 class race was called off owing to the sickness of "California Belle," owned by William T. VanBrunt of Middletown.

"Dick Crocket," owned by William Heyer of Belford, won in the 2:40 class. The horse was driven by Mr. Heyer's son, Archie Heyer. "Georgia Lou," owned by Louis Snyder of Colt's Neck, finished second in the first heat, and "King Alpha," belonging to Charles H. Borden of Red Bank, finished second in the second heat. The prize was a blanket valued at $10.

The mule race was the closest race of all. The entires were those of George Wilkins of Scobeyville and Frank Weeks of Colt's Neck. The first contest was a dead heat, and the second heat was won by Mr. Wilkins's mule. The steed was driven by Bert Conk of Scobeyville, and Mr. Weeks's mule was driven by "Rags" Smith of Red Bank. Mr. Wilkins got a prize of a whip.

THREW FLAG IN GUTTER.

FRITZ WEBERLING GOT MAD BECAUSE IT KNOCKED HIS HAT OFF.

It was an Italian Flag and Some Italians Had Mr. Weberling Arrested—The Hearing Held Yesterday and the Case Dismissed.

The recorder's room in the Red Bank borough hall was packed with a big crowd of spectators yesterday afternoon at a hearing in which Fritz Weberling was the defendant. Mr. Weberling has lived at Red Bank thirty years and is engaged in the bicycle business on Front street. On Thanksgiving night he undertook to attend the moving picture show at the Bijou theater on Monmouth street. The theater was packed and although Mr. Weberling had bought a ticket he was unable to get in.

An Italian flag was hanging in front of the theater and in passing under it Mr. Weberling's hat was twice knocked off. This, combined with his failure to get in the theater, angered him and he tore the flag down without realizing that he was tearing down the emblem of the Italian nation. Threats were made against Mr. Weberling by some Italians who were near by. Policeman Edward Connors appeared about that time and escorted Mr. Weberling part of the way home to see that he was not harmed. A complaint was made against the bicycle dealer and this resulted in the hearing yesterday.

Joseph Reilly represented Mr. Weberling and Thomas Fay of Long Branch was the lawyer for the plaintiffs. A large number of witnesses were called by both sides, one of them being Mr. Connors. He stated that Mr. Weberling tore the flag down before he had time to stop him and that no one had asked him to arrest the bicycle dealer. Justice Sickles dismissed the case.

It was stated before the hearing that at the next meeting of the Red Bank commissioners a request would be made to have Mr. Connors removed from the police force on the ground that he failed to arrest Mr. Weberling. On account of the result of the hearing the complaint is not likely to be made. Mr. Connors has been a member of the Red Bank police force three years and his record is excellent. He is one of the men under consideration for appointment as chief of police by the incoming councilmen.

W. K. HOPPING FARM SOLD

THE PLACE BOUGHT BY GEORGE SOAPER OF NEW YORK AS A COUNTRY ESTATE.

The Farm is Directly South of the Two Hillcrest Properties Recently Sold and Could Very Profitably be Disposed of as Building Lots—The Homestead and a Large Plot Reserved by Mr. Hopping—Farm Has Half a Mile Frontage on the Highway.

A contract has been made for the sale of the Walter K. Hopping farm in Middletown township. The farm contains about 125 acres, but part of the farm, including the buildings, is reserved by Mr. Hopping. The price to be paid is $25,000 and the contract is to be consummated in January. A considerable sum was paid on the signing of the contract. The purchaser is George Soaper of New York city, who contemplates converting the property into a handsome country estate.

The farm is on one of the main Belford roads and is almost directly south of the two Hillcrest properties which were recently sold. One of these Hillcrest properties was owned by the James M. Atkins estate of Red Bank and was bought by the Red Bank Real Estate company several months ago. It was laid out in lots and over 100 of these lots have been sold. The other Hillcrest tract was owned by Mrs. John T. Hopping and was bought by Harold W. Powers of Red Bank. This tract was bought about six weeks ago. It was turned over to the Red Bank Real Estate company for development and was laid out in lots. About a dozen lots on this property have been sold.

The Walter K. Hopping farm adjoins these Hillcrest properties and is remarkably well located for development as building sites. All that section of Middletown township is being rapidly laid out in building lots and nearly a thousand building lots were sold there last year. This section extends from Campbell's junction to Leonardo. The Hillcrest properties are in this neighborhood, as are also the Sherman farm and other properties bought and developed by Cardashian, Martin & Co. The Hopping farm includes a portion of Garrett's Hill, which is one of the finest elevated properties in the entire eastern part of Monmouth county. The Hopping farm, or that portion of it bought by Mr. Soaper, would cut up into over 1,000 building lots. The price paid by Mr. Soaper is considered fair to both buyer and seller, according to the prices at which properties have been selling of late in Middletown township. If it should be cut up into lots, instead of being converted into a country estate, the lots would probably bring from two to three times the price paid by Mr. Soaper. It might take two or three years to make the necessary streets and other improvements and sell off the entire tract, but real estate sharps have estimated that the tract could be entirely sold out in that time, with a profit of $25,000 to $50,000.

The farm has a frontage of about half a mile on the public highway and it also has a long frontage on the New Jersey Southern railroad. This railroad frontage could be made of service for transferring material for the development of the tract, though no regular trains are run over that part of the Southern railroad at the present time.

The Walter K. Hopping farm adjoins the farm of the late James H. Frost, now owned by his children, they being Samuel, Joseph, Daniel and Edward Frost, Mrs. Sarah Crawford and Mrs. Morford Taylor. This farm contains about 85 acres. The Walter K. Hopping farm also adjoins the farm of William A. Hopping of Red Bank. This farm contains 103 acres. On the Frost farm is part of the Garrett Hill elevation, and on the William A. Hopping farm is another elevation nearly as high, this elevation being part of the Chapel Hill ridge. All three of these farms overlook New York bay, Sandy Hook and the Atlantic ocean and are regarded as choice properties.

PIG ROAST DINNER.

Guests of William C. Lippincott Put in a Hilarious Time.

A Thanksgiving pig roast dinner was held at Mr. and Mrs. William C. Lippincott's of Little Silver last Thursday. The guests were Mr. Leary and the Misses Leary of New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Sickles of Shrewsbury; Miss Emma Conover, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Conover, Henry Conover and Miss Munn of Lincroft; George Richdale, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Walling and Harry Walling of the Phalanx; Mr. Bradstone of Perth Amboy and William C. Wolcott of Red Bank.

The guests spent the entire day at the Lippincott home and they had the time of their lives. An original poem was read by Miss Munn. She is a school teacher at Lincroft. Her poem was about the difficulty of reciting and in the poem she skilfully worked in some peculiar happenings that befell her guests. No names were mentioned, but the allusions were unmistakable and the poem created much merriment.

In the afternoon Mr. Lippincott loaned some of his horses to his guests for horse races. The riders rode jockey fashion. In the first race Harry Walling's mount beat Henry Conover's and in the second match Harry Sickles won a victory over Mr. Walling. Dominoes and other games were played and solos and duets were sung.

KEYPORT LOAN REPORT.

Second Loan Association of Raritan Bay Town in a Thriving Condition.

The annual report of the Second Keyport loan association has just been made public, and compared with the records of building loan associations in towns the size of Keyport, it makes a very fine showing. The total amount of money received during the past year was $93,802.74 and at the end of the year there is a cash balance on hand of $25,741.92. The loan has resources of $262,005.81, and the loans on shares and mortgages amount to $232,798.39. The fifth series of the association matured with last month's payment and the shareholders are now being paid off, some with a clear title to their property, and those who have not borrowed anything against their shares have the option of taking the cash or leaving it with the association on a demand note, payable at the will of either party with interest at 4 per cent. There were at the end of this year 3,969 shares in operation and there will be a great many more than this next year in spite of the fact that a large number of shares will be paid off, as a new series is to be started this month. The profits of the association to date are $51,633.02. The fifth series which is being retired paid $203.36 for every $144 paid in. The regular election of officers of the association will be held tomorrow and it is likely that all the old officers will be re-elected as they give universal satisfaction to the shareholders.

WHERE IS MARY A. GOLDEN.

She Said She Lived at Seabright but Postoffice Folks Cant Find Her.

Last week THE REGISTER printed an item saying that Miss Beatrice Munsell had received a premium in the school department at the Red Bank fair last summer and that Edgar A. Slote, the secretary of the fair association, had been unable to find her. The secretary knows where she is now all right. He received upwards of twenty letters telling him that Beatrice had moved to Whiting, New Jersey. He was called up on the phone innumerable times and he said that a score or more of people whom he met on the street had hastened to tell him that Beatrice lived at Whiting and would be glad to have the check sent there. Her check was sent last Saturday.

The secretary was so elated over getting rid of Beatrice's check that he notified THE REGISTER office that he had another check for which no owner can be found. This check is for a premium won in department J, better known perhaps as the department of domestic science. This check is for $7. The exhibitor gave the name of Miss Mary A. Golden and on the entry blank her address was given as Seabright. The check was forwarded there immediately after the fair closed and was returned to the secretary with the report that no such woman lived at Seabright. The secretary is as anxious that Miss Golden shall get her check as he was to get Beatrice Munsell's address. Anyone who knows Miss Golden's address is asked to notify the secretary of the association, Edgar A. Slote, at the fair office at Red Bank.

INDUSTRIAL TEACHING.

The New Course at the Beech Street School to be Started This Week.

The equipment of the Beech street school for the new course in industrial training is almost complete. A vacant room in the building will be fitted up for use of this course. In the cooking class the pupils will be taught the economical use of various foods, and how to prepare and serve them to best advantage. The table linen, towels and aprons will be washed and ironed by the pupils under competent instructors. It is expected that the new course will not only be of great advantage to the children in making them capable home makers, but that it will prove one of the most interesting courses of study in the school.

Many townspeople who believe in industrial teaching in the public schools have offered to donate supplies and materials from time to time. William J. Sutton, one of the members of the board of trustees, has contributed some kitchen ware, and a sewing society of which Mrs. John Allen is president has made the aprons for the children. Some of the hemming and sewing of the table linen has been done by the sewing classes of the high school.

Work in the new course at Beech street will be begun this week.

The Mistletoe Pup Is Ready For Christmas

This pup knows a good thing when he sees it, so he is right under the mistletoe, though Christmas is not here yet.

We can learn even from dogs. GET READY FOR CHRISTMAS before Christmas comes so that you'll have lots of fun and furnish joy to others. Shop early and get the pick of the bargains; also you will be doing a kindness to the overworked shopgirl and other clerks, including the driver of the delivery wagon. THE PEOPLE WHO WORK FOR THE STORES also like to have time to enjoy Christmas, and if they are fagged out they can't enjoy it.

Kidney Troubles Attack Red Bank Men and Women, Old and Young.

Kidney ills seize young and old.
Come quickly with little warning.
Children suffer in their early years.
Cant control the kidney secretions.
Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain.
Women worry, cant do daily work.
Men have lame and aching backs.
The cure for man, woman or child is to cure the cause—the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for sick kidneys.

The following testimony proves their worth:

Mrs. Mark Pailles, First St., Keyport, says: "A member of my family suffered from weak kidneys, the kidney secretions being too frequent in passage. Backache also caused him much suffering and there were pains through his sides. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were used and they brought relief. At that time I publicly recommended them and I now have no hesitation in confirming my former statement."

Is it Anybody's Business?

(An old ballad of fifty years ago.)

Is it anybody's business
If a gentleman should choose
To call upon a lady
If the lady don't refuse?
Or, to speak a little plainer,
That the meaning all may know;
Is it anybody's business
If a lady has a beau?

Is it anybody's business
When that gentleman does call;
Or when he leaves the lady?
Or if he leaves at all,
Or is it necessary
That the door in should be drawn,
To save from further trouble
Prying outside lookers-on?

Is it one body's business
But the ladies, if her beau
Rides out with other ladies;
And does not let her know?
Is it anybody's business
But the gentleman's, if she
Should accept another's escort,
Where he ought not chance to be?

If a person's on the sidewalk,
Whether great or whether small,
Is it anybody's business
Where that person means to call?
And if you see a person
As he's calling anywhere
Is it any of our business
What his business may be there?

The substance of our query,
Simply stated, would be this;
Is it anybody's business
What another's business is?
If it is, or if it isn't,
We would really like to know;
For we're certain, if it isn't,
There are some who make it so

The benefit of Christmas shopping early is becoming more and more appreciated.

To save time is to save money and this is important to the busy housekeeper. To assist those living at a distance and who find that time as well as money can be saved by doing their trading in Red Bank, the Peoples' Market will be open evenings till after the holidays.

While meat markets do not expect to supply the Christmas gifts, still a nice Smoked Ham, a Turkey, a Goose, a Pair of Chickens, a Pair of Ducks, a Smoked Tongue, or a nice strip of Sugar-Cured Bacon, could all be considered appropriate and, in very many cases, highly appreciated.

For this week and during the Holiday Season we offer many specials. The following is the schedule for the week:

Fresh Killed Monmouth County Fowls, extra fine quality, per lb.	18c.
Fresh Killed Monmouth County Roasting Chickens, extra fine quality, per lb.	20c.

The increasing demand for our Sausage, which we make fresh every day, is very gratifying to us, and we feel that you will be well paid if you try it for breakfast. Absolutely pure, uniformly seasoned, reasonable in price, 16 cents per pound, 2 pounds for 30 cents.

COUNTY TAX BOARD GRANTS APPEALS OF FIVE KEYPORT TAXPAYERS.

The Ministers' Association Arranges for a Series of Union Prayer Meetings to be held in the Keyport Churches Next Month—Poor Show in Theater Here Almost Caused a Small Riot—High School Literary Society Gives Entertainment.

There were five appeals heard from this borough last Wednesday by the Monmouth county board of taxation on four of which reductions were granted. Alexander Robertson was assessed for $800 and asked for $600 reduction on the grounds that the property was not worth the assessed valuation. The reduction was not allowed. E. M. Stone stated that she was assessed for seven shares of bank stock which belonged to her sister, Mrs. Morrell of Holmdel. Her appeal was granted. C. H. Dodge had his personal tax reduced from $200 to $75 on the grounds that his furniture was not all here on assessment day. Mrs. C. H. Longstreet's assessment was reduced to $900 from $1,050, and Frank Howard, who was assessed for $300 for an automobile, claimed that he did not own it on May 20th, and the assessment was cancelled.

Union Prayer Meetings.

The Keyport ministers' association has arranged for a union week of prayer services to start January 9th. The services will all be held at night and the dates, places of services and the speakers are as follows: January 9th and 10th at St. John's Methodist church at South Keyport, Rev. A. W. Hand, and Rev. W. E. Compton; January 11th and 12th at First Baptist church, Rev. A. L. Iszard and Rev. T. S. Yerkes. At the Reformed church Rev. A. L. Iszard will preach on the 16th and Rev. T. S. Show Was a Failure.

The performance "Reuben in New York" given at the Broadway theater Thanksgiving night was a decided failure. The audience, numbering 600, hissed the performers off the stage. The play was the worst that was ever given here and a small sized riot was averted by the prompt action of Constable Mason, who was present, and a few deputies whom he pressed into service.

It took nearly an hour to get the fire under control. The fire was caused by a defective chimney. The damage is estimated at about $1,000 which was covered by insurance. Mr. Bryne's loss was about $100 and was not covered by insurance.

Delivering In Advance

Santa Claus, who comes around on Christmas eve, is not the only Christmas messenger. You can get a messenger to deliver your boxes and bundles in advance, so that you can be Santa Claus yourself and not risk any delay if you'll only BUY SOME TIME IN ADVANCE OF CHRISTMAS. Just order the goods sent around, and the Christmas messenger will deliver them at your door. If you depend altogether upon Santa Claus he may disappoint you, for you know the dear old saint has a great many houses to visit.

The CHRISTMAS BASKET

By Carlyle Moore

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association

"CHRISTMAS! Bah!" His sleep filled eyes had cleared to the meaning of that merry peal of bells.

Whether to find more warmth or shut out the sound that roused him, he drew the scanty blanket over his head and turned shivering to the wall. In either case the result was failure.

He should have known that the first Christmas bell heralds a chorus that swells higher and higher in a crescendo of added voices; that sandwiched between a canvas cot and a single blanket, near a paneless window but half eked out with castoff rags, offers a poor defense against an ideal Christmas morning.

In cold disgust, but wide awake, he cleared the sash within his reach.

"Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas!"

Newsboys, street cleaners, bootblacks, the roundsman as he relieved his mate, paid cheery tribute to the day.

"Even the police," he growled. "Go to the devil! I'm a cynic."

His fingers trembling with cold, he drew the congress shoes (quite new) upon his feet and searched beneath the blanket for his coat, which, having done duty as a pillow through the night, had added creases to those of newness from the day before.

"I wonder," he chuckled mirthlessly, "if old Santa missed my stockin's. If it hadn't been so cold last night I'd sure put them on the mantel," looking about the room, "if there'd been one."

He drew a silver dollar from his pocket.

"I got my presents yesterday. Term shortened for good behavior, a new suit, hat and shoes and one silver dollar. I'd be a bloomin' sport if my hair was a bit longer. Them prison barbers ought to get about a bit and learn somethin' of the styles."

He held the coin close to his eye; it shut out the light. He held it at arm's length; the coin seemed smaller, but he could see daylight.

"I wish you was big enough to do that off there," he growled. "You got to be mighty close to shut things out."

He ambled out and to the street.

"Merry Christmas!" an ash man greeted.

"Naw!" He stamped through the side door of the first saloon. "Red eye!" The coin tinkled on the bar.

"Put that away and be my guest."

The stranger, in a top hat and gray coat, seemed a bit the worse for a Christmas eve that had lengthened into Christmas day, but his wallet was well filled.

"All right. Maybe it will grow if I nurse it." He looked with avid eye upon the stranger's well filled purse.

It was an awkward lurch as the glasses touched that sent the fiery liquor down the outside of a shining shirt front. Distinctly different was the dexterity and grace with which a hand entered the stranger's pocket. That dollar grew to the tune of the wallet's contents.

Profuse apologies, a few pats of good fellowship, a hurried exit, and fortune had placed our friend beyond the squalor of last night's lodgings.

"Bah!" he muttered as he hurried around corners, threaded a side street, then doubled back and took a fresh course. "What's the use of a pickpocket's tryin' to live straight? Who'd hire me? I ain't used to work anyhow. I s'pose there's no hope for an ex-convict. That's what the papers say anyhow. It's good stuff too. It's great to have the papers on your side. It makes slippin' back seem easier."

He trudged along, now and then casting wary glances to the rear. "Now, if there was any one who cared, anything to live for, I know I could make good. But I ain't got a soul. Nobody cares or depends on me, nobody"—

Clang! Clang! Clang! A church bell nigh above changed the tenor of his musings. He sneered. "'All ye who are heavily laden'—I know the system. Bring your troubles here and shift 'em to some one else's shoulders, preferably the devil's, but shift 'em."

He turned the corner. At the very door of the church, half buried in the snow, reposed a market basket.

"Holiday marketin', eh?" He picked it up. "Heavy." He peered through the door, but all was solemn dark within. "Doin' penance, I suppose. Well, here's a practical one for carelessness." With the basket on his arm he turned the nearest corner.

Our friend had a Christmas dinner. True, it was all uncooked. True, he had no home to take it to, no place to cook it. Rather a useless bit of petty larceny it would seem. But each to his trade. The crooked mind is ever one of expedients. He saw a restaurant.

"Sure! I'll get them to cook my dinner. There'll be some left over. Maybe they'll take it off my hands." A plausible story bubbled forth.

"So I want you to cook these things," opening the basket, "and I'll"— He stole a glance at the contents. The lid fell shut. He stared stupidly at the attendant.

"All shall be cooked as monsieur wishes," with elaborate gesture as the waiter reached for the basket.

"I guess you ain't quite qualified to roast this—yet." Our friend mopped a perspiring brow with his disengaged hand. "Where's the nearest police station?"

"Three blocks up the street. And if monsieur will leave his basket while he is away"— But monsieur had bolted out the door, and for several moments a much perturbed waiter wondered why, while three blocks away a much perturbed man with a basket wondered how.

"Any story I'd tell 'em would sound dishy. Then there's my picture in the gallery. A record for good behavior don't go very far. Great Scott! They'll find the pocketbook on me!"

That thought lent wings to his feet. The police station diminished in the distance. What to do with the basket that was now growing heavy on his arm—that was the question. No use going back to the church. It was left there with intention.

"I'm the devil, all right. Somebody's shifted the responsibility to my shoulders. The first time I've been near a church in years too. Well, I've got my lesson. Not again for me."

He thought of sitting down to work his problem out. Those were likely steps where that officer was passing. Hurrying to his goal, he passed the law. Their eyes met for an instant, long enough to thrill the basket man. The officer hesitated as if searching his memory. There was no hesitation from the man behind.

"You got me once," he muttered and raced up the first flight of stairs at hand, plunged into an entry and in his excitement pressed the private bell.

The officer turned back. There was no one in sight. Musing over the resemblance, he rounded the corner of his beat.

Steps sounded on the stairs. The knob turned. Well, he could ask if they had any rooms to rent. That would explain his ringing of the bell. A sweet faced, white haired lady appeared in the doorway.

"WELL, YOU TAKE TO ME, DON'T YOU, YOUNG UN?"

"Do you rent rooms?" he blurted.

"I do not." The little old lady drew herself up, her tone a trifle haughty. The man muttered an apology and turned away. The door moved toward the jamb. A wail, unmistakable in its origin, came from the basket. Three steps of the flight the man measured in a move.

"One moment, sir!" In the voice above authority spoke unquestionably. "Oh, ma'am, please!" That policeman had got on the light fingered one's nerves. In abject fear he turned.

"My poor man!" The kindly old lady saw only the humble pleading of a father to save his child from the inclemencies of the weather. In that moment her dear old mind had built a romance around this situation, of which the hero was the basket man.

She sought no explanation. Merely to do good on such a day was sufficient to her. Was not this the anniversary of a child who centuries before had not even a basket to lie in?

"Come in, my poor man, come in."

"But, ma'am"—

"Not a word, sir. I have a nice warm room that you are welcome to. If you are out of funds there is plenty to do about the house. As for the baby, my daughter has gone west with my little grandson. Your child comes into my house as a blessing."

"But, ma'am, you don't know"—stammering, but determined to explain.

"I do not seek to know," urging him in and toward the rear. "If you have been unfortunate and some day need to tell the story I will listen. Now you and your baby are my guests."

She withdrew and closed the door on the poor sorrowful man and his blessed babe.

"Well, I'll be jinked!" The sorrowful man sank into a comfortable chair and chuckled. "Of all the"— An insistent wailing, accompanied by lusty kicks, heralded the final and complete awakening of the basket's contents.

"Let's see what's here." He threw back the lid and greeted the pink protesting face with a humorous twinkle of appreciation. "Well, you little brat"— Those hands, so deft at pocket picking, were gentler possibly than an honest man's. The babe was cooing on his shoulder.

"Well, you take to me, don't you, young un?" He held the bundle off at arm's length. The infant's efforts to snuggle back pleased him mightily. "There you are, you God's blessed darlin'."

In that restful position the babe cooed off to sleep again. The man sank into a rocking chair and swayed back and forth. He felt comfortable, placid, content. Something had touched a spot in his makeup that had never before been reached.

He was learning in a moment what years could not unlearn—a purpose in life, finding a something to live for, and all taught by a poor little abandoned baby.

"If any one," he thought, looking down at the smiling, unconscious face, "could abandon such as you and not leave hope behind, then there's a chance for both of us in this world. You'll be my hope, you poor, little—I don't know whether you're a boy or a girl; but, which ever, you'll be mine, and, so help me God, I'll be yours—and—and—and—there'll be a chance for both of us."

He sat quietly for a long time. The baby stirred, opened his eyes and still smiled. The man bent down, then hesitated. "I'm not worthy," he muttered, "but I will be—for the future." He kissed the little brow. His eyes were moist.

"Merry Christmas" he breathed, "and," dashing the tears from his eyes, "a happy New Year."

The Boy Who Has No Santa Claus

By ROBERTUS LOVE

[From "Poems All the Way From Pike," copyright, 1904, by Pan-American Press.]

The boy who has no Santa Claus,
So wistful, oh, so wan he looks
Through wondrous windows, making pause
To gloat upon the picture books—
"The Giant Killer," "Mother Goose."
Alas, poor urchin, what's the use?

I saw him standing yesternight,
His nose against the frosty pane,
Enamored of the fairy sight,
So fond, so friendless, oh, so fain
To grasp and beat the painted drum!
He dreamed of seeing Santa come.

So long he stood and looked within
I thought his yearning gaze must charm
The stalwart soldier made of tin
To rise and follow through the storm
And, standing guard above him, make
His dream come true ere he awake.

The jumping jack, the candy cane,
The bugle and the hobbyhorse—
I'd think they would be sick with pain
And sorrowful with deep remorse
Because they did not steal away
And in his squalid garret stay.

The boy who has no Santa Claus,
Oh, sadder far his sorrow is
Than all our grownup woes, because
We have no wishes such as his.
The useless yearn of childhood, oh,
We cannot feel, we cannot know!

Oh, Little Johnny Loney Boy,
I'm sad and sorry for you—so!
You shouldn't miss the perfect joy
Of Christmas, for the years are slow.
If I'd the making of the laws
I'd give each boy a Santa Claus.

Doubled Expense.

"He does an awful lot of kicking about the expense of Christmas presents. He yells twice as much as any other man in the office."

"Perhaps that is because he is leading a double life."

Once Is Enough.

Christmas comes but once a year, it is true, but it takes three days to recover from its effects and the rest of the year to get ready for the next one.

A Christmas Truth.

At Christmas the small boy will love the giver without any regard to his being cheerful or grouchy.

His Preference.

"I do not believe in kissing under the mistletoe," said Gladys Beautigirl.

"Neither do I," promptly replied young Hugglus. "Right here, wherever it happens to be, is good enough for me."

Thereupon he proceeded to prove it.

No Cigars This Christmas.

"What do you expect your wife to give you for a Christmas present?"

"Nothing."

"Well, you seem to be happy over it."

"So I am. I've quit smoking."

ENGLISH FARE.

The Christmas Joint Should Be Flanked by Yorkshire Pudding.

No Englishman or Englishwoman would consider a Christmas dinner properly served without its joint of roast beef, accompanied often with a steaming Yorkshire pudding. In households where the second generation merely carries out the traditions of old England the approved methods of preparing these dishes are not so well known. Those given here have been provided by an authority. For the roast beef select the top sirloin or the third and fourth cut of ribs. This may be left for a standing roast or have the bones removed and the roast skewered or tied in round shape. The time allowed for roasting a large piece of beef is usually twelve minutes for every pound and twelve minutes for the pan. Put a little suet in the baking pan, dredge the roast with salt, pepper and flour and put into a very hot oven, with two or three tablespoonfuls of beef drippings or suet on top of the roast. If you wish to have a fine brown do not add water until the meat is seared. After that a little hot water or beef stock may be added to the pan. Baste frequently. Sometimes a gill of sherry is added to the gravy during the last twenty minutes of cooking, but this is by no means necessary.

The old fashioned way of making Yorkshire pudding was to bake the pudding under the meat. But it is far more convenient to bake it in a bread tin or gem pans. Sift together a heaping pint of flour and a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder. Add one tablespoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of salt and rub the butter in with the flour. Beat two eggs until light, add one pint of milk to them, stir into the flour and mix quickly into a stiff batter. Pour a few spoonfuls of the beef drippings from the roast into the pan or in hot gem pans and turn in the batter. Bake in a medium oven, basting with the drippings from the meat. This gives more crust than the old way. Serve as a garnish with the meat.

the sugar is melted, then stir and cook to a smooth paste, add a beaten egg and set aside to become cold.

Beat half a cupful of butter to a cream, gradually beat in one cupful of sugar, the beaten yolks of two eggs and alternately half a cupful of milk and two and one-half cupfuls of sifted flour sifted again with three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

Lastly add the whites of two eggs beaten dry, the cold chocolate mixture and one tablespoonful of warm water. Beat thoroughly. Bake in two layer cake pans about twenty-five minutes.

The cake should be served on a handsome dish, and sprays of holly may be used to give it a Christmas-like appearance.
